DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Cartmell et al. (U.S. Pub 20020138649).

As to claims 1, 13, 19, Cartmell et al. disclose a method, system, and a program product for use in a computer readable media for transforming a Web page, comprising: receiving a copy of the Web page; examining the contents of the Web page to identify an original link that contains a resource locator that specifies a location of a resource on a computer network; replacing the original link in the Web page with a surrogate link that contains an identifier code (See paragraphs 0073; 0101) associated with the resource locator to thereby generate a transformed Web Page (See abstract, paragraph 0079) ; maintaining a map (See paragraph 0039) that relates the identifier code to the associated resource locator. Moreover, Cartmell et al. disclose a content processor and network interface (See page 3).

As to claims 2, 14, 20, Cartmell et al. disclose sending a copy of the transformed Web page containing the surrogate link to a user device that requested the Web page (See paragraphs 0073; 0104).

As to claims 3, 21, Cartmell et al. disclose maintaining a map that relates the identifier code to the associated resource locator comprises maintaining a mapping table that has one or more entries, wherein each entry contains a resource locator associated with an identifier code, the entries being indexed according to associated identifier codes (see paragraph 0039, 0056).

As to claim 4, Cartmell et al. disclose establishing a session with a user device, wherein the table is associated with the session (See Fig.4; paragraph 0076).

As to claims 5, 15, Cartmell disclose the Web page is written in Hypertext Markup Language (HTML), and wherein the original links are identified by an HTML tag (see paragraph 0073).

As to claim 6, Cartmell et al. disclose the resource locator is a uniform resource locator that specifies an Internet address of a resource located on the Internet (See abstract).

As to claim 7, Cartmell et al. disclose the surrogate link specifies a resource location different than the location specified in the resource locator (See paragraph 0073 wherein the web page is tailored to provide different communications link).

As to claim 8, Cartmell et al. disclose the identifier code and the resource locator are alphanumeric strings and the identifier code alphanumeric string is smaller than the resource locator alphanumeric string (see abstract).

As to claims 9, 16, 22, Cartmell et al. disclose a method of accessing a resource located on a computer network, and a program product for use in a computer system that executes program steps recorded in a computer readable media to perform a method for transforming a Web page (See abstract), comprising: receiving a request for a resource from a user device, the request including an identifier code associated with a resource locator that identifies the location of a resource on the computer network; using the identifier code to identify the resource locator that is associated with the identifier code (See paragraph 0073; 0101); submitting a request for the resource associated with the uniform resource locator, wherein the request is submitted to an address specified in the uniform resource locator (See abstract; paragraph 0069).

As to claims 10, 17, Cartmell et al. disclose the identifier code to identify the resource locator that is associated with the identifier code comprises consulting a mapping table that contains one or more entries, each entry containing an identifier code and a resource locator associated with the identifier code (See paragraph 0039, 0056).

As to claim 11, Cartmell et al. disclose the mapping table is indexed according to the identifier codes in entries of the mapping table (See paragraph 0039, 0056).

As to claims 12, 18, 23-25, Cartmell et al. disclose receiving a copy of a Web page; examining the contents of the Web page to identify an original link that contains a resource locator that specifies a location of a resource on a computer network; replacing the original link in the Web page with a surrogate link that contains an identifier code (See paragraph 0073; 0101) associated with the resource locator to thereby generate a transformed Web Page (See abstract; 0079); maintaining a map (see paragraph 0039) that relates the identifier code to the associated resource locator.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Pearl et al. US Pub 2002/0083035 disclose a system and method for wireless delivery of text data.
